YALE.

AN ADDITION TO BE NADE TO BATTELL CHAPEL. New-Haven, March 26 (Special).-The catalogue of the Yale Divinity School came out yesterday. Among the chief features is the large increase in the scholar-ships for needy students. Ten new scholarships, yielding $50 each, have been added for junior students who have been college graduates and have obtained a percentage of 75 in their college course. Five new for high stand men in the graduate class have been added. The total number of students in the seminary is 109. The gift of $25,000 from Robbins Battell, of New York, and his sister, Mrs. Eldridge, of Yarmouth, Mass., has made it possible for the faculty of Yale to enlarge Battell Chapel. This they propose to do, not-withstanding the great opposition to the plan. The proposed addition will seriously mar the architectural appearance of the chapel and that of Durfee Hall. hich adjoins it. It is proposed to add about 300 additional seats, increasing the capacity of the build-ing about one third. This decision has been taken by ne as a settlement of the question concerning comchapel attendance. For several more progressive alumni of Yale have felt that the of compelling chapel attendance should be collahed, and they have spoken and written upon the subject extensively. With the exception of Presi dent Dwight, most of the members of the faculty have been inclined to the same view, but President Dwight is emphatic in declaring that that feature of the college should be maintained, and now that additional room is to be provided, it is probable that he will carry his point for a considerable time longer.

The annual banquet of the outgoing board of editor "The Yale Literary Magazine" to the incoming board took place Friday night, at Heublein's cafe. The toastmasters were Winthrop E. Dwight and The toasts responded to were a follows: "L'Ancien Regime," Winthrop E. Dwight "The New Administration," Ralph D. Paine; "The Faculty Unmasked," Professor H. M. Reynolds; "Home Rule," Irwin B. Laughlin; "The West from a Car Window," A. Lawrence Greer; "The Rise of the Oligarchy," Robert B. Wade: "Reveries of a Bachelor, Edward Boltwood. The incoming board is compose of Ralph D. Paine, chairman; Arthur Judson, financial editor; Henry Eno, Robert H. Nichols and Edward B. Reed. Those retiring are Winthrop E. Dwight, chairman; Richard C. W. Wadsworth, financial editor; John H. Field, Francis Parsons and Lemuel A. Wills. The menn cards were very handsome. On the front onter cover was a miniature reproduction of the fron gage of the magazine. A Yale blue ribbon, tied in a bow, held the pages together.

The work of revising the elective and required course of students in the academic department of Yale has been unusually thorough this year. The num-ber of elective courses has been greatly increased. The whole number of courses offered in the prospectu of 1893 and 1894 is 147, against 129 last year and 120 the year before. The following list gives the number of courses offered in each group of studies and the increase over last year's list: Philosophy, 13, in crease 4; political science and law, 7, increase 0; history, 10, increase 2; modern languages, 24, in crease 2; English literature, 12, increase 0; ancient languages, 26, increase 2; Biblical literature, 10, increase 2; the fine arts, 4, increase 3; physical science, 20, increase 7; mathematical, 1, decrease 1; music, 3, increase 0; total, 147. 16 will be observed that the largest increase is in the natural and physical sciences while in only one line of work has it seemed be to limit the number of electives-mathematics. The most radical change made in the required work of the undergraduates is an arrangement by which the sopho-more year will be the elective to a considerably creater degree than at present. Six three-hour course offered each member of the class, of which five just be chosen, equivalent to fifteen hours of clasroom work. The courses are Latin, Greek, mathematics, modern languages, English and physics. The change gives evidence of a liberal spirit on the part faculty in putting the modern languages and English on the same footing with the classics and mathematics, and in adding the study of physics which heretofore has constituted a part of the required work junior class. The change also puts the study of physics one year shead in the course, and allow eptional work to the sophomores, instead of only the juniors and seniors as formerly. The increase of electives will also extend to the junior year. In the sectus for next year the members of that class be allowed twelve instead of nine hours' work in will be allowed twelve instead or fine hours constituting electives, only one course of three hours constituting their required work. The required course is in mental and moral science. In the senior year, as usual, only one course of two hours is required, and such latitude is given that this is really an elective. The course is a choice of cleven electives in moral science. In the same general work in physiological psychology as the same general work in physiological psychology as last year, with the addition of a course in educational psychology. It is significant that Professor E. J. Phelps, ex-Minister to England, again offers courses in law. He is expected to return to Yale in September. Professor W. G. Sumner's familiar and popular courses in social science are open to the seniors as usual. The new professor offers courses in European and English history, his name being withheld by the faculty for the present. A notable addition is that of several courses in Biblical literature by President Dwight and Professor Curtis, of the Divinity school. In the field of modern languages an instructor, not yet announced, will conduct the required work of the second year. Professor Williams offers two new courses in geology, and Professor Eaton, one in pteriology and bryo'ogy. An instructor whose name is not announced will conduct junior work in physics. electives, only one course of three hours constituting

The coaching is being done by Captain Vall, and Perkins, captain of the Harvard winning crew in 31.

The conclusion of the triangular freshman race between Harvard, Yale and Columbia has brought the freshman crew here into a little more prominence. The men are for the most part green hands, but they are a promising lot of candidates and are getting into respectable condition for a freshman They are a fairly heavy lot of men, averaging crew. They are a fairly heavy lot of men, averaging about 171 pounds. They row in the following order: Townsend. stroke: Shepherd, No. 7; Rice, No. 6; Duffield, No. 5; Shea, No. 4; Russell, No. 3; Stevenson, No. 2; Howland, bow. Townsend has been elected permanent captain.

Captain Frothingham will play his first game of baseball this year on April 1 with Andover at Cambridge. A pleasant surprise has been caused by Havey's allowing binself to be measured for a suit. This means practically that he is to play again this year. The men measured were: Pitchers, A. High-lands, '95; "Jack" Highlands, 2 L. S. S., and J. Wiggin, '93; catchers, F. Mason, L. F; J. HOBART COLLEGE.

Geneva, N. Y., March 26 (Special).-Another important addition to the dormitory capacity of the college has just been made by the purchase of what has been known of late years as the Bridge property, on the lake shore, adjoining the Hale House, owned by the college. The new clubhouses secured by the Sigma Phi and the Kappa Alpha fraternities (that of the Kappa Alpha's is now in process of enlargement) afford student rooms which have prevented the large entrance of last autumn from overcrowding the college. The Bridge property has been secured for the Chi Fraternity, principally through the efforts class and liberal assistance of the chief of the fraternity, the Hon. Reginald Fendall, of Washington, D. C. The building is of the Gothic style, with fine lawns and trees around it, and an excellent dock and boathouse on the shore.

SMITH COLLEGE.

Northampton, March 26 (Special),-On Wednesday evening an exciting game of "basket-lall" was played by the sophomore and freshman teams. The running track of the gymnasium was crowded with spectators, and gay with the colors of the two classes. One side was occupied by sophomores and seniors, the other by juniors and freshmen, and a lively rivalry between the two parties was maintained throughout the contest. The game consists in the two sides trying to get the ball into their respective baskets, which are suspended at opposite ends of the gymnasium, and each side tries to prevent the other rom accomplishing this. Every time the ball is put in it counts one point. All the playing must be done by throwing, as no running while the tail is in the hands is permissible. In spite of the fact that the sophemore captain was disabled at the beginning of the game, the score was 5 to 4, in favor of the sophomores after a close contest of two fifteen-minute balves. The winning side gained a gold and white banner, which will be handed over to the next white banner. Which will be handed over victorious team.

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia, March 26 (Special) .- The university exhibit for the World's Fair will be shipped to Chicago on Friday. It has been found that it is pos chicago on Friday. It has been found that it is pos-sible to make an exhibit fairly representative of the strength of the university, but in some particulars it is necessarily a little un-atisfactory. Of the twelve departments of the university, nearly all will be represented in the exhibit. About one-third of the space assigned will be devoted to the collections from the museums of the university, of which the Babylonian and Assyrian are the most important. The collection which represents the university's expedition to Baby-lonia in 1888-0 will be unique in this country. An-other interesting collection will be that of Cyprian antiquities recently purchased by the university from Dr. Max Obnefalsch Richter. The psychological laboratory will show a small but complete laboratory of experimental psychology, fitted with the necessary ap paratus for experiments in this branch of work, to which so much attention is now being paid by all the universities. A large part of this exhibit has been especially devised for its purpose by those in charge The biological school will show a complete collection of microscopic si'des and microscopes set in position, the slides being prepared in the school. It will also show a microtome invented by Dr. Geenman, of the university, for the purpose of cutting large sections of animal and vegetable matter intended for microscopic examination. The microtome will cut sections ten inches in diameter, and 1-500 of an inch in thickness. A contour machine will also be exhibited for the outline of objects used in laboratory practice. complete set of the publications of the university staff, and also a complete exhibit of the periodicals of the university will be shown. Among the photographs are those of the exterior of all the balldings and 200 photographs of the interiors. PRINCETON.

Princeton, March 26 (Special).-A notice was posted at the University Eating Club last Thursday evening saying that the attempt to run a cooperative eating club for the students of the college had proved a failure. Many atumni were interested in the experiment, which was the second of the kind that has been made at Frinceton. The question of starting such a club was agitated early in the fall of 1851, bu it was not till February of last year that the matter took definite shape and the club was started. Everything seemed to point to ultimate success last year as the attendance was large and the club had the un-qualified approval of the faculty and the prom-inent alumni. At the opening of the present college year the attendance was not so large, and

The number of candidates for the freshman time has increased to about forty, and these men have been practising daily in the cage for the last week.

Boston, March 26 (Special).-The annual report of the president of Boston University to the trusteen contains a brief summary of the farly history of the university and an outline of the general plan which seemed clear that a combination of two types-the German and the English-would give a new one quite superior to either. In this scheme there would be room in the lower, or undergraduate range of work to establish any number of colleges of liberal and the general charter and government of the university. In a few things," says the report, "did Boston University more radically depart from general American tradition than in its conception of graduation. In most, if not all, American universities graduation erminates the membership of the student. But here real membership is to begin when in the other coases. Before taking his first degree the student is, in an important sense, a probationer. lie can reach a permanent life membership only by gaining at least one degree. If he can win his first degree he is thereby promoted to membership in the University Convocation, where through life he is effectively related to the conduct and government of the institution."
